Approximate cost

The price may vary for each country or region, and normally it is divided in two phases. The usual pricing structure in the United States is described below:

¥ The first phase involves removing any compromised remaining teeth, and placing the four dental implants in each jaw along with an immediate temporary bridge secured to the four implants. This phase may cost between $15,000 to $20,000 per jaw.

¥ Approximately 6 months after the first phase and after complete healing and integration of the implants to the bone, a final bridge is usually fabricated. This bridge typically consists of stronger and durable materials than the temporary. This phase may cost between $12,000 to $20,000 per jaw, dependent on the materials used and the type of teeth (porcelain or acrylic resin).

The total price for both jaws could range between $40,000 to $65,000.

You can rest assured that our certified treatment coordinators can tailor a suitable financial package that is affordable for you so that payments can be made over time. Payments can be as low as $399.00 a month for suitably qualified individuals. (Restrictions apply)
